Grant and Lee in the Saddle.

All of the Federal and Confederate goasay, he had an exceedingly good test, but the utterind fiference regarding the uniform of his rank somewhat detracted form his ap-coming a brigadier, even on parade days for review. While on the march or campaign (leneral Grant carried his flat-brimmed but down over his eyes and wore a coat supposed to be one that had done duly at Vicksburg I certainly looked like it. Great always went at a hand gallop when fo lowing the merements of his troops, an untighted digar firmly clenched in his powerfu jawa. When the Army of the Potomac was pursuing Lee's forces, after the evacuation of Riumand and the Potomac was pursuing the state of the Potomac was pursuing the state of the potomac was provided to the potomac was prov mond and the Petersburg stege works, Grant wore out to less than six horses justed of three days. So furiously did he side from noint to point it frequently happened that all of his orderlies were left behind. Indeed, very few of the bradquarter stoff could keep up the peace. Grant once covered 50 inters the saddle. White in motion he sat erect and composed, but he seldom rode at a factor gate than a canter. He had a curious habit of laying his hands on the pommel of salting to converse with any one. Leaning gently forward, Lee's attitude was at ones courteous and agaging. I chanced to meet the great Confederate leader on two occaslone. Being a wounded prisoner after the battle of the Wilderness, I was lying under a locust tree by the road-ide, when Lee came slowly riding past. Quietly halling, he senced over me and began asking questions concerning the federal army. Or my po-licely declining to answer some of his quer-ies the General's face grew and. He bowed slightly, acknowledged my right to refuse, and then rode on in deep though, for I had told him that Grant was present and in real command of the Army of the Potomac.

very busy one. A'ready there is enough work out out and stacked up before it to keep the body employed for some time. Among the most important matters it will have to attend to will be the election of judges for all the counties and two c'reuits the respportionment of the State for con-gressmen and members of the legislature, and the election of a United States Senator. All the bacement officers of the Capitol are also to be elected. Much of this work will bave to be completed before the acjaurn-

It is probable that the rallroad commission bill will be introduced, and though wo-thing has lately been heard from the debt question it is more than probable that this will come up in some form which will demand serious attention. Another problem that will confront the Legislature is the reduction of oriminal expenses, and if this is of the committees of the last Legislature appointed to examina into the matter it will involve considerable change in the number

The Governor's message will, it is undertood, con ain numerous recommendations to the General Assembly. Among the subjects he has given special thought to is the oyster question, and the consideration of this win doubtless consume considerable time. The Governor's idea is that with proper management the cyster-grounds can
